

Contents

Reflections: Public Rhetoric, Civic Writing and Service Learning

Volume 17, Issue 1, Spring 2017

- 1 Editor's Introduction
Cristina Kirklighter, Texas A&M University—
Corpus Christi
- 11 "They Want to Tell Their Story":
What Folklorists and Sociologists Can Teach Compositionists about Linking Scholarly Research to Nonacademic Communities
Nathan Shepley, University of Houston
- 36 Writing our own América: Latinx middle school students imagine their American Dreams through Photovoice
Zak K. Montgomery, Wartburg College
Serena B. O'Neil, University of St. Thomas
- 69 Name It and Claim It: *Cross-Campus
Collaborations for Community-Based Learning*
Beth Godbee, Marquette University
Elizabeth Andrejasich Gibes, Marquette University
- 96 The Role of Narrative in Student
Engagement
Sarah Hardison O'Connor
- 113 Inception to Implementation: *Feminist Community Engagement via Service-
Learning*
Johanna Phelps-Hillen, University of South Florida

- 133 One Billion Rising: Theorizing Bodies, Resistance, and Engagement in a Campus Stop Violence Against Women Movement
Barbara LeSavoy, College of Brockport, SUNY
- 156 Subalternity in Juvenile Justice: Gendered Oppression and the Rhetoric of Reform
Tasha Golden, University of Louisville
- 189 Review: Civic Work Civic Lessons: Two Generations Reflect on Public Service
Kathryn Yankura Swacha, Purdue University
- 194 Review: Historias de Éxito within Mexican Communities: Silenced Voices
Shane Teague, Texas State University
- 199 Review: Tropic Tendencies: Rhetoric, Popular Culture, and the Anglophone Caribbean
Romeo Garcia, Syracuse University
- 206 Review: From Uncle Tom's Cabin to The Help: Critical Perspectives on White-Authored Narratives of Black Life
Edward Santos Garza, St. Edward's University
- 211 Review: Democracy's Education: Public Work, Citizenship, & The Future of Colleges and Universities
Erin Brock Carlson, Purdue University